Archives in Appalachia: A Directory

Ellen Garrison
Editor

The Appalachian Consortium was a non-profit educational organization composed of institutions and agencies located in Southern Appalachia. From 1973 to 2004, its members published pioneering works in Appalachian studies documenting the history and cultural heritage of the region. The Appalachian Consortium Press was the first publisher devoted solely to the region and many of the works it published remain seminal in the field to this day.

With funding from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities through the Humanities Open Book Program, Appalachian State University has published new paperback and open access digital editions of works from the Appalachian Consortium Press.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

No project of this size is ever completed without help from a variety of sources, and we are grateful to all who made this directory possible. First and foremost, we thank the National Historical Publications and Records Commission for the funding which provided staff and support to mail over 1,000 questionnaires and compile the responses. We are especially grateful to Nancy Sahli and Sandra Anderson of the commission staff who answered numerous questions about the whys, wherefores, and how-tos of the project.

This directory would not exist had hundreds of librarians, archivists and curators not taken time from their already busy schedules to complete our questionnaire. A very special thanks to all of you—especially those who, owing to the vagaries of the US Postal Service, received the questionnaire only days before the deadline for return. We hope this research resource we are placing in your hands will be some compensation for your diligence in responding to our queries.

The project was planned and directed by an advisory committee consisting of at least one representative from each state included in the directory. These individuals assembled mailing lists, revised and critiqued our survey instrument, encouraged professional colleagues in each state to respond to our queries and personally followed up with potential contributors to insure that our directory would be as complete as possible. For their thoughtful and timely guidance, we wish to thank Lisle Brown, Marshall University, West Virginia; Anne Campbell, University of Kentucky; Richard Dillingham, Mars Hill College, North Carolina; Hellen Kimsey, Mountain Regional Library, Georgia; Michael Kohl, Clemson University, South Carolina; Jim Lloyd, Western Carolina University, North Carolina; Dorothy McCombs, Virginia Polytechnic Institutes and State University; and Charles Robb, Berea College, Kentucky.

Kathryn Wheelock, project coordinator, was responsible for compiling our master mailing list, producing and mailing all questionnaires, designing our directory format and inputting all data, and contacting all non-respondents by phone and in person. It is to Kathryn we owe our exceptional response rate.

Lewis Cox, a student at East Tennessee State University, assisted Ms. Wheelock in designing the computer-based format for the directory and completed work on the final phases of data entry, proof-reading, and printing after Ms. Wheelock's resignation in early 1985. To Lewis, and his mastery of our sometimes uncooperative Apple II, we owe our success in using the modern technology which baffled others on the project staff. We are also grateful to Susan Twaddle and Milt Tober of ETSU's office of computer services for their assistance in this and other phases of the project.

The leaders of the Appalachian Consortium, including Emmett Essin, chairman of the board of directors; Barry Buxton, executive director; Malinda Crutchfield, associate director; and Lois Forrester, administrative secretary, contributed not only practical help in administration and organization but much-needed moral support and encouragement. Jacqueline Stewart, assistant director of the Consortium Press, designed the directory cover and served as our advisor in production and printing of the directory. Members of the Consortium's Heritage and Folklife Committee generously gave of their time during our 1984-85 meetings to critique our survey instrument, suggest additions to our mailing list and cheer our progress.

Many individuals at East Tennessee State University supplied the expertise required to implement the project. To Abbott Brayton, director of contracts and grants; Betty Tester and Lynn Myers, comptroller's office; and Rosemary Barson, University Press, many thanks for your patience and cooperation.

Finally, we are grateful to Dr. Fred Borchuck, director of the Sherrod Library, East Tennessee State University, whose support made possible our work on this project; to the many friends in the library's division of reader services who helped compile our mailing list and answered numerous questions quickly and cheerfully; and to the loyal and devoted staff of the Archives of Appalachia, especially Kathryn Wilson and Barbara Minor, who assumed extra duties so that we might devote our time to this project.

To all of these colleagues on our own campus and elsewhere whose support, encouragement and hard work made this directory possible, thank you. For the errors and omissions which exist in spite of your best efforts, we take full responsibility.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

This directory consists of entries describing 181 repositories in 195 counties* in south central Appalachia which hold historical records documenting the political, social, cultural, and economic history of the region, and a list of "Coming Attractions," agencies which do not currently collect manuscript materials but which plan to do so in the future. Also included are indexes by type of material and by subject which will enable researchers to locate selected genres of documentary material (e.g. photographs) or materials related to a particular subject.

The questionnaires from which this directory was compiled were mailed to all colleges and universities, public libraries, museums, historic sites, and historical and genealogical societies in the region listed in published directories and to selected secondary schools, businesses, and churches known to hold historical records. We included cultural facilities operated by federal, state, or local governments and public libraries which serve as a repository for local government records. However, we omitted facilities which operate solely as government records repositories and the two state archives (West Virginia Department of Archives and History and the Western Office of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History) in the region.

Each main entry, based on the questionnaire completed by the repository staff, includes information on the name, location, and hours of the repository; the type of repository; the types of material held by the repository; the broad subject areas covered by these records; the geographical area that the records cover; and the inclusive dates and size of the holdings. We have also included the name of the staff member primarily responsible for manuscripts in each repository. Researchers are urged to contact these individuals for additional information about a repository's holdings.

The main entries are arranged first by state and second alphabetically by the name of the repository. The form of entry used for a repository depended primarily on the form used by the individual completing the questionnaire. Generally, a repository which is a division or department within a larger agency is filed and alphabetized under the name of the department or division (i.e. Special Collections) not the name of the larger agency (i.e. Berea College). However, collections of local historical or genealogical societies which are housed in public libraries are frequently listed only under the name of the public library. Also, the directory was alphabetized by a computer, and computers are intractable little beasts. Therefore all repository names are alphabetized absolutely by the first word in the name (i.e. Frank H. McClung Museum is found under "F").

Because of inconsistencies in form of entry and computer alphabetizing by perhaps unexpected first words in an entry, it is advisable to check under possible variations of a repository

* Information on the counties can be found following this section.

 Abbreviations are used for type of repository, type of material, and subjects; a key to these abbreviations precedes the "Main Entries."

name when a listing for a specific repository cannot be located. To facilitate such searches, there is a list of all repositories in each state included following the "Coming Attractions."

Each entry is numbered in the order in which it is filed, and all index citations are by this repository number. However, because duplications were discovered during final proof-reading, five entries had to be deleted after all entries were numbered. Thanks again to our intractable computer, renumbering was impossible in the time available, and therefore there are no entries for numbers 29, 105, 107, 109 and 120.

We hope this directory will provide researchers who seek to explore Appalachia's rich heritage with access to the local documentary resources which make such work possible. However, we could not include the many repositories outside the region which hold significant documentary material related to Appalachia. For information on these collections, researchers should consult the National Historical Publications and Records Commission's DIRECTORY OF ARCHIVES AND MANUSCRIPT REPOSITORIES and the NATIONAL UNION CATALOG OF MANUSCRIPTS published by the Library of Congress.
